

KMarie Reid, MD, MS, MBA, FACS

Dr Reid is a Professor of Surgery in the Department of Surgery at Morehouse School of Medicine in Atlanta, GA. She currently serves as the Director of Quality and Chief for the Section of Liver, Pancreas and Foregut Surgery in the Department. She is the current Chief of Surgery at Grady Memorial Hospital and also serves as Grady's Medical Director of Surgical Quality and NSQIP co-champion. Dr. Reid is an US Army veteran, with service in Operation Desert Storm, and a prolific researcher in the treatment of liver and pancreatic cancers. Dr Reid has over 100 combined peer-reviewed publications and book chapters. She earned her medical degree at Washington University in St. Louis, completed, her residency in general surgery at the University of Pittsburgh, a fellowship in hepato-pancreato-biliary surgery and a master's degree in Biomedical Sciences at Mayo Clinic. She completed her Master's in Business Administration at Brandeis University in Boston, MA.